- Participation of at least 2 professors, one from WMSU and other from an external university, who will be teaching, simultaneously, each in their respective country, a class with similar contents;
- Both teachers, at the time determined for this purpose and in the course of their respective subjects, define a series of dynamics, activities and or projects that their students will develop in an asynchronous or synchronous collaborative way (this considering the time zone of each country, as well as the days and time of each class, both options being acceptable for the project) with the students of the other institution in the form of teams. Students will be able to use the didactic and technological resources provided by the institution, also relying on their own creative sense. For the development of the activities, the students of both countries will receive an evaluation and grade from both teachers. Each team must be made up of students from both institutions;
